Directors Notes

Imagine a world where science is disbelieved, women are not heard, sickness is everywhere yet nothing is done to stop it, and the story begins in the 20s. No, I am not talking about today, but approximately 100 years ago. Radium Girls follows the story of Grace Fryer and her friends as they work at the dial painting factory, where they paint the dials of watches with radium paint that glows. This seemed like a harmless and simple job to those on the outside, but those who were on the inside saw a different story: the truth. Dial painters and other factory workers were being infected by the radiation from the paint and have countless ailments and issues that arise due to the radiation. Many even lost their lives.

The Nobel Prize winning scientist, Marie Curie, discovered radium with her husband as a new element and studied its effects on the human body. She discovered the benefits radium could give to mankind. Knowing that radium could be used to shrink tumors, cancers, and other growths and ailments, Madame Curie and her husband investigated further. Over time doing research, the Curies discovered the problems of working with radium. Madame Curie's husband soon fell ill and died from radiation poisoning. During Mr. Curie's decline in health, the focus shifted to the hazards and harms of radium on the body and how it is killing people slowly. Curie focused on how to minimize these dangerous effects and how to stop them from happening all together compared to the benefits.

We see the aftereffects of Grace Fryer and Marie Curie's stories with radium in our modern science. Though radium is still used to treat cancers (much more safely now than ever before), it still has destructive qualities and could be utilized for evil. What we do with the knowledge we have and the power that comes with it determines how mankind will be viewed for decades and centuries to come. We still talk about the devastation of the nuclear bombings in Nagasaki and Hiroshima (no nuclear bombs without radium), and how they have affected the rest of the world. We still talk about the radiation poisoning throughout Chernobyl and how it has been a ghost town for years. Know the power in which you can control and use that power to benefit yourself and the world, not destroying them.

As a great educator once said, "With great power comes great responsibility," and it is up to each and every one of us to decide if we are going to use our knowledge and experience to help or harm the world. Consequences of all actions are greater than just ourselves. Your actions will speak louder than your words, and the impressionable will listen. What choices are you making? What choices will you make moving forward? Will you help or harm the world with your knowledge and experience? For all of mankind, I hope that the choice is to help.

Directors' Notes
Student Director
Katelynn Hulme

Radium Girls reflects many parallels in between the 1920's and today. Learning how much and how little has changed in the past 100 years has really opened my eyes about the problems going on in the world. As a woman I find it astonishing how much disrespect women are still receiving to this day. The show is very heartfelt and emotional and will hit you in the heart in ways you don't expect it. Following the Radium Girls story and watching them fight their battle is very inspiring. It motivates me and I hope it motivates all of you to fight for the things you believe in. With such trying times it is important to stand up for what you believe in. Learn from the past and use it to shape how you help mold the future.

Directing Staff

Shane Sandau (Technical Director)

One thing I love about theatre is its reflective nature, helping us to hold a mirror up and consider: life, society, our place in this world, or even one company's role in the lives and deaths of the women it employs. Working on a theatre project is always rewarding, and a show like Radium Girls has the substance to make it transformative. It is not inconsequential for our students to tackle an artistic work that pits its characters against an invisible poison that, slowly killing them, forces the audience to consider the culpability of the ghosts they see on the stage, all while both actors and audiences find themselves in the midst of a pandemic. In moments like this, it is easy to see the need for this kind of theatre, even as places like Broadway stand silent and dark.

In my fourth year at Oak Park and my second as Technical Director, it comes as no surprise to me that the cast and crew have met the challenges of this difficult show, in these distinctive times, with a grace and maturity that give me hope for tomorrow. This is one of the few endeavors, the transformation of a script from words on a page to living and breathing characters, that allows people from all walks of life, of every different persuasion and perspective, to persist and thrive, contributing to a common goal. This show and this cast give us a fine example of how it can take the Herculean efforts of courageous individuals and the collaborative work and support of and willing allies to move the needle toward justice and the truth. The radiation of Radium is invisible, but once you can see it, its struggles and lessons resonate and reflect in the world we call home. The cast and crew have helped us to experience and understand the unseen.

Katie Hulme (Student Director)

Katie Hulme is a Senior who has been doing theatre since her 6th grade year. While only being involved at Oak Park since sophomore year she has left an impact on each and every production she has done. Katie is the Student Director and Dramaturg for Radium Girls. She would like to thank her best friend, Kaleighan, for pushing her to direct Tammy. Without that push she wouldn't have realized her love for directing. Katie will also be directing Yellow Boat this spring. While the shows are dramas, Katie is on the improv team so her humor can still shine.
